

To Whom It May Concern:

I am very pleased to recommend Dilek Nelson for admission to your mathematics teaching position. As her professor for Introduction to Macroeconomics, I have watched Dilek develop both academically and personally into a mature individual ready in every way for her future years.

Dilek is bright, energetic, compassionate and genuinely well rounded. Her grades have been consistently above average in all of her courses. Especially, I am very impressed by her performance above average in my class. She often raised interesting questions and showed enthusiasm about learning. In the end of semester, she ranked top five out of seventy-three students (5/78) in the end of semester.

Unlike many people who are not sure which career to pursue, Dilek has made clear to us all that her goal is to be a teacher. To this end Dilek has worked tirelessly in her program and showed the greatest effort in every aspect in my class.

Most important of all, Dilek stopped by my office hours very often and told me she is absolutely thrilled about how to be a good teacher. From our chats, I found that Dilek knows her subject well and her presentation is very well-organized which are the characteristics of a good teacher would have.

In closing, let me take a moment to recount an incident which I believe speaks volumes about the superior nature of this candidate. Two months ago I was returning from lunch to my office when I saw ahead of me in the hallway Dilek, arms opened out in front of a group of high school students, which were visiting our school but couldn't find their guide. Dilek showed the students directions immediately and quickly earned acquaintance with them putting an end to the embarrassing situation that had erupted.

It is clear to me as I hope it is to you that this young lady, Dilek Nelson, is an exceptional candidate, one that would contribute greatly to any position. I wholeheartedly recommend her and wish her the very best in all future endeavors.

Sincerely,
