To Whom it concerns -

I would like to recommend Ms. Dilek Nelson as a teaching candidate.

Dilek had been a student in my Fall 2007 Writing for Business and The Professions course that is offered by Rutgers University's prestigious Writing Program. The purpose of this capstone course is to encourage students to develop and defend a specific project proposal, which is supported by academic research, so as to add to the current paradigm of their field and thus to begin developing a unique professional profile for themselves. Therefore, the proposal can be considered a baccalaureate thesis. In addition to the presentation of research, components of these proposals include budgeting, project scheduling, contingencies, and the predictive modeling of results. Dilek had successfully developed a proposal for a renting website where tenants and landlords could rate each other (in the manner of eBay) and which also included current local rentals and other information relevant to both parties. I had recognized the thorough substantiation of Dilek's plan by her use of appropriate research sources, her exceptional writing ability, and her use of logical argument and persuasion. Her accompanying oral defense was clearly executed and articulate. Dilek's continual concern for excellence earned a cumulative course GPA of 3.91 / 4.0, placing her 2nd in a class of 22 students.

Dilek has been double-majoring in Mathematics and in Computer Science. Her ability to successfully handle this work-load is consistent with my perception of the general congeniality and self-motivation that allows her to execute tasks with elegance and enthusiasm.

I hope that you recognize that Dilek's concern for excellence, her congeniality and enthusiasm, her self-motivation, and her diligence in presenting written and oral material clearly and persuasively, are all indicative of her future success as a teacher.

Sincerely,

John Weick
